DETAILED ACTION

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: The second line of page 6 (ABSTRACT) is grammatically incorrect. On page 1, line 9, "A that" should apparently read --At that--. On page 1, line 9, "when" should be capitalized. On page 2, line 14, "at" should be capitalized. On page 3, line 3, "of" should be deleted. On page 3, line 13, "this" should be capitalized. On page 3, line 20, "13" should be replaced with --19--.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claims 1-3 are objected to because of the following informalities: In claim 1, line 5, it is not clear how information is read in opening (19a) in figure 3. In claim 1, line 6, "reader bar" should be replaced with --bar reader--. See also claim 1, line 7 and claim 2, line 5. In claim 2, line 5, --which-- should be inserted after "information". In claim 3, line 5, "the" should be deleted. Appropriate correction is required.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McConnell in view of Easley.

McConnell teaches a system for duplicating keys including a basic key reader 14 and a sliding bar reader 32 for touching and determining the location, depths and spaces of wafers within a lock, and reading information at 80, 82 in an opening 30 of the head 16 of the reader. The free end thereof at numeral 36 in figure 1 defines a knob for the bar reader. Easley teaches providing a bend 22a, 22b for a bar reader to define a knob 28a, 28a. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide a bend in the bar reader 32 of McConnell, in view of the teaching of Easley, the motivation being to provide a separate knob for actuating the reader, as well as to provide a friction fit for the reader 32 within the opening 32, to prevent the inadvertent separation or loss of the bar reader 32 from the reader 14.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McConnell in view of Herzenberg.

McConnell has been discussed above. Herzenberg teaches providing an identical color (see color match of column 5, line 51) between a knob portion 36 of a key portion and a holder portion 82. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide an identical color between the knob (at 36) of McConnell and the reader 14, in view of the teaching of Herzenberg, as an indication of which bar reader should be used with which basic reader.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McConnell in view of Naill (151) and Heredia.

McConnell has been discussed above. Naill (151) teaches recording information (see column 3, line 2) for lock decoders 52 for vehicles (see column 1, line 62). Heredia teaches that it is well known to record vehicle information on cards 16, as seen in figure 10J. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to record the information of vehicles used with the basic key reader of McConnell on cards, in view of the respective teachings of Naill and Heredia, the motivation being to provide a directory for convenient access of information for specific locks, for key duplication purposes.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
